Annual Report 2018

The 2018 Annual Report provides a comprehensive account of the WTO's activities in 2017 and early 2018. The Report begins with a message from WTO Director-General Roberto Azevêdo. This is followed by a brief overview of 2017 and more in-depth accounts of the WTO's various areas of activity over the past 12 months. Spotlights highlight major WTO events and activities, including the 11th WTO Ministerial Conference held in Buenos Aires.

World Trade Statistical Review 2018

World Trade Statistical Review 2018 looks into the latest developments in world trade, with a detailed analysis of the most recent trends for trade in goods and services. The analytical chapters are complemented by a statistical appendix containing over 60 tables providing detailed data on trade by region and sector. The publication serves as an invaluable reference tool for researchers, policy makers and anyone interested in international trade.

A comprehensive overview of the latest developments in world trade, covering trade in goods and services.

As well as providing data on goods and services, the publication also looks into trade in value-added terms and the latest trade policy developments, highlighting recent trends in WTO members' use of trade-restrictive and trade-facilitating measures. In addition, it provides information on the participation of developing economies in world trade, Aid-for-Trade financial commitments and implementation of the WTO's landmark Trade Facilitation Agreement.

World Trade Report 2018

The Future of World Trade: How Digital Technologies are Transforming Global Commerce

Trade has always been shaped by technology but the rapid development of digital technologies in recent times has the potential to transform international trade profoundly in the years to come. Computing, automation and data analytics are coming together in entirely new ways that deeply impact what we trade, how we trade and who is trading. What will be the consequences of the "new digital revolution" on the world economy, and in particular on international trade? The Report provides an analysis of the changes at play and estimates the extent to which global trade may be affected over the next 15 years.

The World Trade Report 2018 examines how digital technologies – and in particular the Internet of Things, artificial intelligence, 3D printing and Blockchain – affect trade costs, the nature of what is traded and the composition of trade.

The Report discusses the opportunities arising from the development of digital technologies, in particular for developing countries and smaller firms, but also the challenges. It also examines how international trade cooperation can help governments both seize these opportunities and address the challenges.

The Report finds that one of the most significant impacts of digital technologies is the extent to which they will reduce trade costs. It also highlights that digital technologies will affect the composition of trade by increasing the services component, fostering trade in certain goods such as time-sensitive products, changing patterns of comparative advantage, and affecting the complexity and length of global value chains. A number of simulations outlined in the Report show that future technological changes are expected to increase trade growth, especially in trade in services, and that developing countries are likely to gain an increasing share of global trade. The expansion of digital trade is likely to entail considerable benefits but international cooperation is needed to help governments ensure that digital trade continues to be an engine of inclusive economic development.

Mainstreaming Trade to Attain the Sustainable Development Goals

The WTO is central to achieving the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development and its Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), which set targets to be achieved by 2030 in areas such as poverty reduction, health, education and the environment. This publication looks at the role played by the WTO in delivering the SDGs and identifies a number of steps that would help to ensure that international trade contributes to accelerating progress in achieving these goals.

Trade Policy Reviews

Trade Policy Reviews analyse the trade policies and practices of every member of the World Trade Organization. As well as analysing by sector and by trade measure, the reports also look into the country's wider economic environment. The reviews consist of three main parts: an independent report by the WTO Secretariat, a report by the government, and the concluding remarks by the Chair of the WTO's Trade Policy Review Body following discussion of the review by the WTO membership.

A key trade policy facts section provides an overview of the main findings and a visual summary of the average tariff rates applied by the member.

World Trade Report 2017

Trade, technology and jobs

The 2017 World Trade Report examines how technology and trade affect employment and wages. It analyses the challenges for workers and firms in adjusting to changes in labour markets, and how governments can facilitate such adjustment to ensure that trade and technology are inclusive.

The Report looks in particular into the part played by technology and trade in the shift of employment from manufacturing to services, in the decreasing proportion of middle-skilled jobs, in the growing value placed on skills within the jobs market and in the increasing participation of women in the workforce.

Trade Multilateralism in the 21st Century

Building the Upper Floors of the Trading System Through WTO Accessions

Trade multilateralism in the twenty-first-century century faces a serious test as weakness in the global economy and fast-paced technological changes create a challenging environment for world trade. This book examines how an updated and robust, rules-based multilateral framework, anchored in the WTO, remains indispensable to maximizing the benefits of global economic integration and to reviving world trade. By examining recent accessions to the WTO, it reveals how the growing membership of the WTO has helped to support domestic reforms and to strengthen the rules-based framework of the WTO. It argues that the new realities of the twenty-first century require an upgrade to the architecture of the multilateral trading system. By erecting its 'upper floors' on the foundation of existing trade rules, the WTO can continue to adapt to a fast-changing environment and to maximize the benefits brought about by its ever-expanding membership.

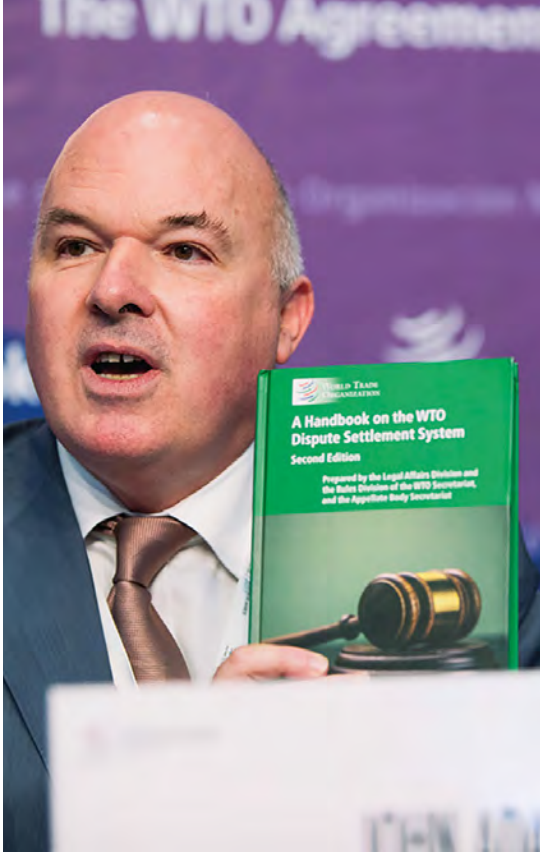
A Handbook on the WTO Dispute Settlement System

Second edition

The WTO dispute settlement system has become one of the most dynamic, effective and successful international dispute settlement systems in the world over the past twenty years. This second edition has been compiled by the dispute settlement lawyers of the WTO Secretariat with a view to providing a practice-oriented account of the system. In addition to describing the existing rules and procedures, this accessibly written handbook explains how those rules and procedures have been interpreted by dispute settlement panels and the Appellate Body, and how they have evolved over time. The handbook provides practical information to help various audiences understand the day-to-day operation of the WTO dispute settlement system.

Prepared by the Legal Affairs Division and the Rules Division of the WTO Secretariat, and the Appellate Body Secretariat.



Includes resources such as tips about notification procedures, templates of working procedures, timetables of actual disputes and statistical data.

Trade and Food Standards

Trade in food is difficult to imagine without standards. Food standards give confidence to consumers about the safety, quality and authenticity of what they eat. By setting out a common understanding on different aspects of food for consumers, producers and governments, harmonization on the basis of international standards makes trade less costly and more inclusive. Food standards and trade go hand in hand in ensuring safe, nutritious and sufficient food for a growing world population.

This publication emphasizes the importance of participation and engagement of governments in standards development in Codex and in resolving trade concerns in the WTO's specialist committees (the Committee on Sanitary and Phytosanitary Measures and the Technical Barriers to Trade Committee), as well as the importance of capacity development, which together contribute to the dynamism and robustness of the global system of food standards and trade.

Aid for Trade at a Glance 2017

Promoting Trade, Inclusiveness and Connectivity for Sustainable Development

This edition of Aid for Trade at a Glance focuses on trade connectivity, which is critical for economic growth, inclusiveness and sustainable development. Physical connectivity enables the movement of goods and services to local, regional and global markets while digital connectivity is vital in today's trade environment. Yet, the Internet remains inaccessible for 3.9 billion people globally, many of whom live in the least developed countries.

This report builds on the analysis of trade costs and extends it into the digital domain, reflecting the changing nature of trade. It seeks to identify ways to support developing countries – and notably the least developed – in realising the gains from trade. It reviews action being taken by a broad range of stakeholders to promote connectivity for sustainable development, including by governments, their development partners and by the private sector. One message that emerges strongly is that participation in e-commerce requires much more than a simple Internet connection.

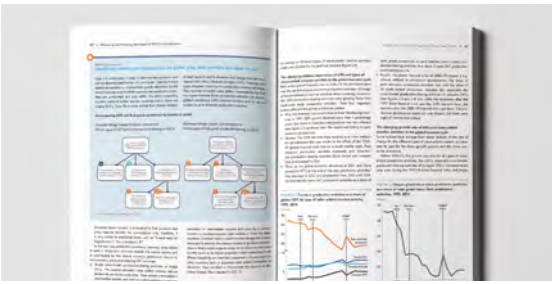
Global Value Chain Development Report 2017

Measuring and Analyzing the Impact of GVCs on Economic Development

Global value chains (GVCs) have transformed world trade. GVCs create new opportunities for developing countries, increase their participation in global markets and enable them to diversify exports. But while global value chains have helped many developing countries advance, some have benefitted more than others. The Global Value Chain Development Report, a joint publication from the World Bank Group, WTO, OECD, IDE-JETRO and the Research Center of Global Value Chains (RCGVC), analyzes new data to understand global trade's increasing complexity and to formulate policies that can make GVCs more inclusive.



A joint research effort to better understand the ongoing development and evolution of GVCs and their implications for economic development.

Investing in Skills for Inclusive Trade

Investing in Skills for Inclusive Trade focuses on the linkages between trade and skills and between trade and skills development policies. The publication argues that in the fast-changing context of globalization, where technology and trade relations evolve rapidly, the responsiveness of skills supply to demand is particularly important.

Drawing on the findings from relevant literature and from the ILO's Skills for Trade and Economic Diversification (STED) programme, this publication shows that appropriate skills development policies are key to helping firms participate in trade, and also to helping workers find good jobs.

20 Years of the Information Technology Agreement

Boosting Trade, Innovation and Digital Connectivity

Over the past 20 years, the Information Technology Agreement (ITA) has increased worldwide access to high-tech goods, such as computers, mobile phones and semiconductors. It has also contributed to greater access to the Internet and the growth of the digital economy, creating new opportunities for businesses and individuals in both developed and developing countries.

To mark the 20th anniversary of the ITA, this publication analyses the impact of the ITA on its participants and on worldwide trade in IT products. It also reviews new developments, such as the landmark deal concluded in 2015 to eliminate tariffs on an additional 201 IT products valued at over $1.3 trillion per year. Finally, it highlights what still needs to be done to meet the UN's Sustainable Development Goal of providing universal and affordable access to the Internet so that the benefits of the digital revolution can be enjoyed by all.

Over the past 20 years, the WTO's Information Technology Agreement (ITA) has increased worldwide access to high-tech goods.

An Advanced Guide to Trade Policy Analysis

The Structural Gravity Model

An Advanced Guide to Trade Policy Analysis outlines one of the most successful tools for the analysis of trade policy and provides practical guidance on how to apply this tool to trade policy making. The book is a follow-up to "A Practical Guide to Trade Policy Analysis" published in 2012.

The gravity model is one of the most successful frameworks in economics. Hundreds of papers have used the gravity model to study and quantify the effects of various factors on international trade. This book guides the reader through the challenges of applying the model and provides recommendations on how to obtain reliable partial equilibrium estimates for the effects of trade policy. The book has been written by experts who have rich practical experience in this field. It is aimed at government experts engaged in trade negotiations as well as graduate students and researchers involved in trade-related study or research.

African Perspectives on Trade and the WTO

Domestic Reforms, Structural Transformation and Global Economic Integration

Twenty-first-century Africa is in a process of economic transformation but challenges remain in areas such as structural reform, governance, commodity pricing and geopolitics. This book looks into key questions facing the continent, such as how can Africa achieve deeper integration into the rules-based multilateral trading system and the global economy. The book provides a range of perspectives on the future of the multilateral trading system and Africa's participation in global trade.

The publication is based on contributions to the Fourth China Round Table on WTO Accessions and the Multilateral Trading System, which took place just before the WTO's Tenth Ministerial Conference in Nairobi in December 2015.

Regional Trade Agreements and the Multilateral Trading System

The book explores bilateral and regional trade agreements and examines how they are changing international trade rules. It offers an important contribution to the current debate on the role of the WTO in regulating international trade and how WTO rules relate to new rules being developed by RTAs. It provides a deep analysis of RTA provisions, identifying which provisions tend to be more liberalizing than others, whether there are any trends that can be identified and whether RTA provisions are moving ahead of the WTO framework, thereby creating a dual system of standards for international trade.

While previous work has focused on subsets of RTAs, the studies in this publication are based on what is probably the largest dataset used to date.

Making Trade Work for the Environment, Prosperity and Resilience

This co-publication by the WTO and UN Environment looks at the interplay between trade and the environment and identifies ways to ensure that trade and a healthy environment reinforce each other. It highlights the need for coordinated action, along with fit-for-purpose policies and institutions, to expand the contribution of trade for a better and more resilient environment. It shows how the WTO and UN Environment are working to support countries in identifying opportunities to use trade proactively to promote sustainability and prosperity, and to strengthen international co-operation to turn opportunities into action which delivers benefits for all.

A joint publication of the World Trade Organization (WTO) and UN Environment.

How Trade Can Help to Reduce Poverty
10 Case Studies

Through the lens of ten case studies of developing and least-developed countries, this volume shows that the expansion of international trade is essential to development and poverty reduction and that trade can drive poverty reduction through a number of channels, including boosting growth, increasing productivity, and empowering women.

These studies also demonstrate that complementary policies are needed, to ensure that people living in extreme poverty can benefit fully from trade opportunities.

This is a follow-up to "The Role of Trade in Ending Poverty" co-published by the WTO and the World Bank in 2015.

The new publication brings together 10 case studies to look at the different ways in which trade can help to reduce poverty.

Can Blockchain Revolutionize International Trade

This publication seeks to demystify the Blockchain phenomenon by providing a basic explanation of the technology. It analyses the relevance of this technology for international trade by reviewing how it is currently used or can be used in the various areas covered by WTO rules. In doing so, it provides an insight into the extent to which this technology could affect cross-border trade in goods and services, and intellectual property rights. It discusses the potential of Blockchain for reducing trade costs and enhancing supply chain transparency as well as the opportunities it provides for small-scale producers and companies. Finally, it reviews various challenges that must be addressed before the technology can be used on a wide scale and have a significant impact on international trade.

WTO Ministerial Conferences: Key Outcomes

WTO Ministerial Conferences: Key Outcomes contains all the key outcomes from WTO ministerial conferences since the organization was established in 1995. Covering 11 ministerial conferences held between 1996 (Geneva) and 2017 (Buenos Aires), the key outcomes include ministerial decisions and declarations as well as chairpersons' statements. The outcomes include the Ministerial Declaration on Trade in Information Technology Products of 1996, the Declaration on the TRIPS Agreement and Public Health of 2001, the Ministerial Declaration on the Doha Work Programme of 2005, the Decision on Agreement on Trade Facilitation of 2013 and the Decision on Export Competition of 2015. An appendix contains ministerial outcomes of the Uruguay Round that were not formally integrated into the Agreement Establishing the WTO.

The publication complements perfectly "The WTO Agreements", recently published by CUP and the WTO, which contains the Agreement Establishing the WTO and its annexes.

GATT 1947: The Disputes

Volume 1: Introduction and One-page Summaries

In celebration of the 70th anniversary of the GATT, this publication was prepared in order to disseminate verified and factual information concerning GATT disputes. This publication represents the first comprehensive research effort by the WTO Secretariat to consolidate data on all disputes covering the period from 1948 until 1995, based on a thorough research of public and internal records kept by the WTO Secretariat.

Tariff Negotiations and Renegotiations under the GATT and the WTO

Procedures and Practices
Second edition

Over the past seven decades, since the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) was established in 1947, there has been a phenomenal increase in international trade in goods, largely due to sustained efforts by the world's main trading nations to reduce and eliminate tariff barriers in a multilaterally orchestrated manner. This publication reviews how the procedures and practices relating to tariff negotiations and renegotiations have evolved over this time. In particular, this new edition recounts how negotiations to expand the duty-free coverage of the Information Technology Agreement were concluded and provides an account of tariff renegotiations regarding successive enlargements of the European Union. It also covers tariff negotiations for the accession of a number of new members to the WTO, such as China and Russia. This book will be of particular interest to negotiators, members of government, trade ministries, economists and academics specialized in trade policy.

Comprehensive update of the previous edition first published in 2001.

'It repays a close reading, and provides a comprehensive understanding of GATT/WTO tariff negotiations and renegotiations. It also makes an important contribution to the goal of transparency in international trade.'

A Handbook on Accession to the WTO
Second edition

A Handbook on Accession to the WTO was first published by CUP in 2008, covering 23 accessions concluded between 1995 and 2007. Since then, 13 more accessions have been concluded. While the procedures governing the WTO accession process remain largely unchanged, the second edition of the Handbook incorporates the substance of commitments undertaken in the newly completed accessions. It also updates the basic rules and discussions pertaining to WTO accessions, including the General Council Decision of 2012 on Accession of Least-Developed Countries. In addition, the new Handbook contains a new chapter on transparency in WTO accessions and updates elements which have been enhanced in the management of WTO accessions, such as technical assistance and training for acceding governments.

'The accession process is important for many reasons and yet it is among the least studied and understood parts of the trading system. Thus, the WTO Secretariat is to be commended for sponsoring this project and enlisting Mr Williams to write The Handbook on Accession to the WTO. The Handbook will be especially useful for government officials and the private sector of applicant countries who need to understand the arcane accession process. The Handbook will also help to stimulate new scholarship on accession.'

Trade in Knowledge

International trade has long served as a vital conduit for the transfer of technological knowledge and for the dissemination of cultural works. This trade originally took place predominantly through the knowledge content embedded in physical goods, but is increasingly defined by transactions that directly licence intangible intellectual property rights and by related trade in services. Content industries such as the music, audio-visual, publishing and software businesses are more likely today to 'sell' their digital products as bundles of IP rights than they are to sell physical copies of these products.

Growing recognition of the value and impact of the knowledge component of trade was a key factor in the conclusion, some 25 years ago, of the Agreement on Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS) within the framework of the WTO. However, contemporary policy makers confront an entirely new set of challenges integrating TRIPS measures into trade policies that respond to a digitally transformed knowledge economy; these challenges extend to the basic capacity to measure and to map the IP dimension of trade.

This book aims to establish an authoritative basis for more clearly mapping the contemporary economic, legal and policy trends that are shaping trade in knowledge. A broad-based, selective group of internationally renowned economists, lawyers and policy analysts systematically review the current literature on the economic, legal and policy landscape for trade in knowledge and provide an integrated overview, grounded in empirical learning. They examine how to map knowledge flows across borders and how to assess the impact of these flows, and on that basis chart the consequent legal, economic and policy dimensions.

The publication will examine the following:

Part I: Conceptual Framework

Part II: Measuring Trade in Knowledge

Part III: Impact of Knowledge Flows on Trade and Development

Part IV: Policy, Regulatory and Legislative Frameworks

Part V: Looking Forward

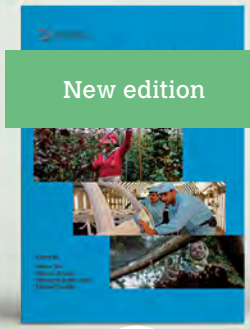
Trade, Connectivity and Inclusiveness
Case Studies by WTO Chairs



Trade, Connectivity and Inclusiveness: Case Studies by WTO Chairs gathers together research undertaken by the WTO Chairs Programme on topics such as trade and poverty, promoting connectivity and "trade behind the headlines", which was the theme of the 2017 WTO Public Forum. The papers were presented by WTO chairs at the 2017 Aid for Trade Global Review, the 2017 Public Forum and the Annual Conference of the Chairs Programme held in Bueno Aires, Argentina, at the end of 2017.

The WTO Chairs Programme aims to support and promote trade-related academic activities by universities and research institutions in developing and least-developed countries. The Programme currently consists of 19 institutions.

The Role of the TBT/SPS Agreements in Supporting International Regulatory Cooperation

This publication focuses on the role of the WTO in supporting international regulatory cooperation. The publication takes a critical look at how WTO members' implementation of the Technical Barriers to Trade (TBT) Agreement and the Sanitary and Phytosanitary Measures (SPS) Agreement and the work of the TBT and SPS committees contribute to improving regulatory quality. The publication aims to bridge the gap between the trade community and the regulatory policy community.

Competition Policy and Intellectual Property in Today's Global Economy

This publication examines a range of issues relating to the inter-relationships between competition policy, intellectual property rights and international trade and investment flows in today's global and knowledge-based economy. It surveys the field systematically and yields practical and policy insights that will be of interest both to scholars and practitioners, including those working in national intellectual property offices, competition agencies and international trade policy administrations, in addition to universities, think-tanks and other organizations.

Making Globalization More Inclusive
Lessons from Government Adjustment Policies

This publication identifies examples of how governments have adopted adjustment policies that have contributed to making globalization more inclusive in developed and developing economies. The publication contributes to the policy debate in several ways. First, it helps to explain how governments can ensure that the benefits from trade are shared more broadly within countries. Secondly, by showing how the design of appropriate adjustment policies can make globalization more inclusive, it responds to concerns about the effects of trade on labour markets. Thirdly, it helps to explain how governments can respond to technological change, which may have a more significant impact on changes in the labour market than those caused by trade.

Trade Facilitation Agreement: Breaking New Ground

The Trade Facilitation Agreement is the first multilateral treaty adopted in the WTO since the organization was created. This book looks at how the Agreement is structured and how it relates to existing WTO agreements, namely the Customs Valuation Agreement, the Agreement on Rules of Origin, the Agreement on Import Licensing, the Agreement on Technical Barriers to Trade, the Agreement on Sanitary and Phytosanitary Measures and the Agreement on Pre-shipment Inspection. The publication includes the full text of the Trade Facilitation Agreement.

The Trade Facilitation Agreement entered into force on 22 February 2017. Its aim is to streamline, simplify and standardise customs procedures and to ease the flow of goods across borders.

Agriculture Policy Landscape

The food and agriculture landscape has dramatically evolved in the past 15 years and faces new challenges in the future. Developing countries play an increasingly important role in world agricultural markets, with five out of the six top producers being developing countries. The mix of policies implemented by countries that affect the agriculture and food sector has also evolved over the past decade.

Policy makers have a variety of tools at their disposal to ensure that their population has adequate food and to ensure that the enabling conditions for their agriculture and food sector are in place. While the WTO's agriculture rules have minimised distortions in production and trade, there is considerable room for improvement so as to enable the multilateral trading system to respond effectively to the transformation of the agriculture sector.

This publication contains contributions from experts in agriculture policy and trade from both developed and developing countries on the trends and future expectations of the global food and agriculture economy. The publication also focuses on contemporary issues of importance to developing countries.

Global Value Chain Development Report 2019

Global value chains (GVCs) that spread the production process across countries have greatly expanded their share of world trade and world production over the past 20 years. In the years immediately after the Global Financial Crisis, however, the expansion of GVCs stalled, according to some measures reported in the 2017 GVC Development Report. At the same time, the world has seen the emergence of populist, protectionist movements in many advanced countries with potential consequences for growth opportunities in developing countries but also, in a world of high interdependencies, developed economies.

The second Global Value Chain Development Report brings together a set of studies that examine the inter-related issues of technology and business model innovation, supply chain trade and workers in a globalized world. It updates the trends in GVC development in both developed and developing economies according to a set of GVC indicators based on available macro and micro statistics, and explores the development of GVCs by technology level, by income level, and by economic and geographical blocks.

Inclusive Trade: Spreading the Benefits of Openness More Widely

Trade can be considered inclusive if it creates equal opportunities for all to participate and share its benefits. However, the notion of trade inclusiveness has remained relatively broad, encompassing various dimensions. This publication brings together a number of contributions, with the aim of clarifying the concept of trade inclusiveness and the analytical framework that could be used to assess inclusiveness in relation to trade.

The publication considers trade inclusiveness from four perspectives: countries, regions, firms and people. At the country level, inclusive trade would create a level playing field for all countries, irrespective of their size and economic power. At the regional level, inclusive trade would create equal opportunities to gain from trade for different regions of a country, including relatively poorer, remote and rural regions. At the firm level, inclusive trade would ensure equal opportunities for all enterprises, irrespective of their size and market power, including micro, small and medium enterprises. Finally, at the household level, trade would be inclusive if its benefits could be broadly shared, including by disadvantaged social groups (youth, women, migrants, etc.). Thus, inclusive trade may be seen as a unifying framework for disperse policy issues, all of which are high on the global agenda.

The publication will examine the following:

Part I: Introduction: Overview and Policy Lessons

Part II: Inclusive Trade Analytics

Part III: Trade and the Various Dimensions of Inclusiveness

Part IV: Inclusive Trade: Domestic Policies and Practices

Part V: International Cooperation in Promoting Inclusive Trade

A World Trade Organization and Cambridge University Press co-publication.

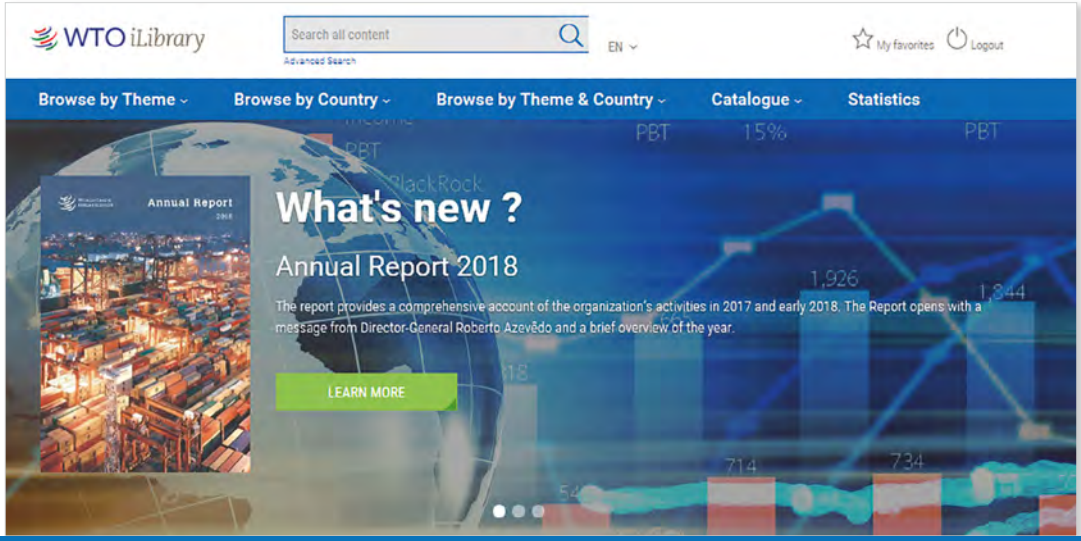
WTO iLibrary

A new dynamic research tool
provided by the World Trade Organization



www.wto-ilibrary.org

An invaluable source of information on global trade

The WTO iLibrary contains:

- Over 400 titles published by the WTO or co-published with other international organizations, comprising almost 4,000 chapters
- Over 30 WTO titles co-published with Cambridge University Press, comprising over 500 chapters
- Over 400 dispute settlement reports
- A range of statistical data on trade topics
- Over 200 WTO working papers

Content is made available in a variety of digital formats, including PDF, HTML and CSV.

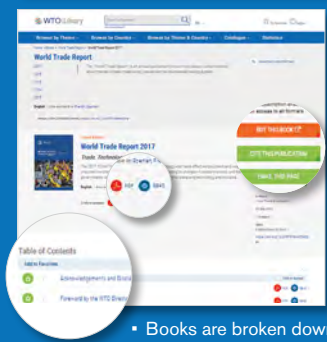
Enriched metadata makes the content full searchable, meaning users can drill down easily to their specific areas of interest.

Key features

- Users have unlimited access to subscribed content.
- Free inclusion of content in course packs without need to request permission.
- A Read Online feature allows users to read and share content on all connected devices: desktop and mobile.

- A citation tool allows content to be easily integrated into bibliographic references.

- Content can be viewed by country, topic, language, year and title.



- Each publication page contains a link to the WTO's Online Bookshop for ordering printed copies.
- All content can be fully downloaded or copied/pasted for reuse elsewhere.
- Books are broken down by chapter.

The WTO iLibrary will be regularly updated and expanded to incorporate new content on global trade.

The WTO iLibrary has been developed in partnership with the OECD.

For questions related to access and subscriptions, please contact: WTO-ilibrary@oecd.org

For questions about content, please contact: WTO-iLibrary@wto.org

Permissions and reviews

Permissions

The WTO encourages the broadest possible dissemination of its information, particularly for educational purposes. Unrestricted official WTO documents and legal texts are free for public use. These can be downloaded from the WTO website.

Material from official WTO publications can be reproduced for non-commercial purposes provided the appropriate credit is given to the WTO and the WTO is informed. To obtain permission, requests must be submitted by e-mail to publications@wto.org. Responses to permission requests will be made only by e-mail, not by fax or conventional mail.

Reviews

Review copies of WTO titles are made available, upon request, at the discretion of the publications section. The request must be made in writing and emailed to publications@wto.org.

Conditions of sales and shipping

Conditions of sales

Prices and dates may change without notice. Every effort has been made to ensure the accuracy of information at the time of printing. All prices quoted in this booklet are in Swiss francs (CHF).

Returns are not permitted for items purchased directly from the World Trade Organization or its online bookshop. Transactions are concluded on a firm sales basis only with no right of return. The World Trade Organization is an international organization established under the Uruguay Round Agreements, which took effect on 1 January 1995. The WTO is accorded the privileges and immunities attributed to organizations created under the UN Charter of 1947. This includes exemption from all taxes, including sales tax (VAT) and customs duties, for publications sold in Switzerland and all other countries.

Shipping & handling

In the case of online orders, shipping and handling fees are added. Please note that publications will not be dispatched until payment has been received. Shipping is handled by a courier service. Delivery is to be expected within 94 working hours following the date of despatch.

Depository libraries

Many countries have depository libraries where you can consult WTO publications. To find a library near you, visit www.wto.org/deplib.

WTO Reference Centres

You may also consult WTO print and electronic publications at WTO Reference Centres around the world. To find a centre near you, visit www.wto.org/refcentres.
